A Season of Light

2020 HOLIDAY GIFT GUIDE

ALL THINGS merry and bright

The season of giving is so much more than brightly wrapped packages adorned with beautiful bows.

While going through your nice list, choose gifts that show how much you care—for the recipient, for Mother Nature, and for people around the world. This year we partnered with women artisans experiencing economic hardship who handcrafted and assembled some of the unique keepsakes you'll find in this gift guide. You'll also discover merry bundles and magical collections that are naturally derived and chosen especially for you!

Whether you're browsing for family, friends, or neighbors or bookmarking products for your special someone to find (wink wink), you can feel confident that you're gifting the very best nature has to offer.

Shop handmade. Empower female artisans.

The D. Gary Young, Young Living Foundation empowers women living in economic vulnerability by investing in small business and fair-trade enterprises like the women-led artisan groups featured in this guide. These artisans are working hard to break the generational cycle of poverty for their children, families, and communities.

Visit YoungLivingFoundation.org/developing-enterprise to learn more.

Read stories of the artisans as you shop handmade items wherever you see this stamp.

About the artisans

Ella's mother, Nez, lived nearly her entire life on the Navajo reservation in a hogan with no electricity or running water. A single mother of 10 children, she provided for her family through hard work and handcrafting traditional blankets to sell. Decades later, Ella, with her daughters Sheila and Valerie, formed Sáanii Dahayóóígíí, or Women of Strength, to honor Nez's tradition of hard work and handcraft.

Each Southwest Sterling Silver Necklace and Diffuser Bracelet was carefully handcrafted in Utah and Arizona by this artisan group. The group provides vital employment to low-income women to help them care for their families.

About the artisans

In the heart of Bethlehem, Evon has employed hard work and creativity to build an olive wood handcrafting workshop to help her family rise above poverty and provide a full education for her six daughters.

Through the Holy Land Handicraft Cooperative Society, the handcrafted trees in the Olive Wood Giving Grove collection were made in collaboration with dozens of family-owned workshops, like Evon's, throughout Bethlehem. This cooperative works to heal the extreme sociopolitical divide in the region, providing a lifeline for families seeking economic stability.

Each day Raksha Nepal seeks to foster economic independence through skills-based training, bring justice to perpetrators of sexual exploitation, and create awareness of sex crimes in Nepal. To date, Raksha is responsible for the rescue and rehabilitation of 790 children and has provided vocational training for more than 500 women.
